Nik Komyati believes that his varied experience in the law strengthens his ability to provide solutions to his clients' most difficult problems. He is a Principal in the firm's Financial Institutions practice. In that capacity, Nik represents financial institutions including investment banks, broker-dealers, hedge funds and insurers in complex matters in state and federal court. Nik has successfully defended FINRA arbitrations, receiving dismissal of all claims against the firm's clients. He has handled regulatory inquiries and responses on a multitude of issues and has also handled employment matters including expungement of various matters from financial advisors' Form U-4 and U-5s.

In his commercial litigation practice, Nik provides counsel for closely held businesses, transportation and trucking companies, creditors, and contractors. Nik's commercial litigation experience includes breach of contract and enforcement of agreements, partnership/joint venture disputes, business torts, breach of fiduciary duty allegations, and shareholder issues. Nik has prosecuted and defended these matters in state and federal court throughout the country.

Nik's diverse catalog of experience has allowed him to develop into an outside general counsel for many clients and assist with their corporate matters as well. He is involved with corporate formation and structuring, private equity transactions, hedge fund transactions and redemptions, complex securities transactions, and the sale of restricted securities under Rule 144.

Nik is also the Firm's practice area leader for its cannabis practice group. He advises clients with regards to licensing, financial, regulatory and compliance issues for cannabis and hemp companies. Nik also advises ancillary service providers to the industry on their financial, regulatory and compliance matters. His broad base of experience allows him to carefully walk clients through this emerging industry and its unique challenges.

Experience

- In a recent matter, Nik represented a creditor and party to a debtor's bankruptcy proceeding in Florida. The debtor breached a settlement agreement with approximately $270,000 in payments remaining and despite having $1.5 million in assets, which he argued were shielded from collection. The Trustee agreed with the Debtor and attempted to settle the claims for a de minimus amount with the Debtor. Nik challenged the settlement. At trial, Nik successfully argued that the assets were shielded essentially through fraud and the Judge agreed, finding that the settlement was not in the best interest of the creditors and that there was an indicia of fraud. This led to the client receiving a much larger settlement of $520,000.
- A New Jersey corporate client recently relied on Nik to represent them in a case involving internet defamation. Nik successfully argued that New Jersey had jurisdiction over California residents who defamed our client via the internet. He convinced the court that electronic messages specifically targeting our client and attacking the client's IP address were contacts with New Jersey significant enough for the court to have personal jurisdiction over the defendants. This matter was thereafter favorably resolved for the client with permanent restraints against the defendants.
- Nik also successfully argued an Order to Show Cause against a company that was breaching its contractual obligations to issue stock to a client. As part of the equitable relief received, the Judge ordered that the company could not issue stock to anyone until it issued stock to the client (in accordance with its contractual obligations). This order essentially stopped the company's ability to operate, causing the company to immediately capitulate and issue the requisite stock to the client.
